

367 A. D.

Letter by ATHANASIUS, Bishop of Alexandria, provided the first authoritative list of the 27 currently recognized books of the New Testament

367

ATHANASIUS named the Books of the Bible.

367 AD

CELTÖ

Combined attack of Picts, Scots, Angles, Saxons on the Romanized part of Britain. Magnus Maximus repulses if and thus becomes, in tradition, a Celtic hero

Spring 367

after careful preparation Valens opened hostilities against the Tervinge, which lasted into late summer 369.

At Transmoussa - Tetrakon a pontoon bridge was thrown across the Donau. The Romans crossed and advanced into WALDCHIAN heartland of the TERVINGIAN - TAI FALIAN settlement. ATHANARIC skillfully managed to evade the Roman army again & again and he withdrew with the greater part of the barbarian confederacy, the Romans ravaged the land but suffered themselves from Partisan activity. "Thereafter, claimed AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS" the emperor Valens returned unopposed with his troops, without having inflicted any serious damage on the enemy or having suffered any himself.

367-369

TERVINGI - VESI Veszeghe

war with Valens

Under their king, ALARIC, the Goths fought unswervingly against Constantine the Great, but with fair success against the Romans under Valens

367AD

---

The Canon of the New Testament was not fixed for the Eastern Church until AD 367

367 AD

VALENTINIANUS I with GRATIANUS (West) &
VALENS (East) emperors